

Andrea Jamison is a librarian and lecturer at Valparaiso University. She received a Masters of Art in Teaching from Concordia University and a Master of Library Science degree from Dominican University School of Library and Information Science in River Forest, Illinois. Her major included a focus on school libraries and youth services. She is currently completing doctoral work in Information Studies at Dominican University. Her current research involves examining the marginalization of African Americans in children's literature.

Andrea Jamison has over 17 years of experience working in schools and libraries. She speaks internationally on issues related to creating inclusive learning spaces for youth and the interplay of race, power, and privilege in children's books. Andrea is a library ambassador for Lee and Low Publishing, one of the largest multicultural publishers of children's books. She is the incoming vice chair and chair-elect of the American Library Association's (ALA) Ethnic & Multicultural Information Exchange Roundtable where she currently serves as a board member. Andrea works extensively with ALA. She is a newly elected councilor and racial healing facilitator. Her prior work includes serving as a contributing blogger for ALA's Office of Intellectual Freedom and member of their prison rights and collection development working groups.

Twitter: @achitownj

Blog: Reviews in the City (reviewsinthecity.com)